Growing Hope

We see hope growing in so many ways here with our Burmese Migrants. They have dreams and desires. They don't let what is in front of them be the final picture. We get inspiration from them as we support their journey with education and health programmes.

We recently visited homes children and parents at home in the school holidays and its always an inspiring yet challenging experience to see and understand the struggles and challenges they face as migrants.

We are delighted our Online University students grow hope in their community by teaching children without a school and teaching Migrant Workers Thai language and Computer studies to give them better opportunities for the future.

Once again we are thankful to so many friends and supporters and schools who have given generously to support our education programmes recently. Your support is truly making a big difference here.

Enjoy some student stories and videos below.

Thanks for your continued prayers and support.
